MONEY TO LOAN

Apply by mail P. O. Box 62, Sonoma.

Very Misleading.

Battersby came across this interesting item in the household department: "If men would answer their wives kindly and courteously when asked for money it is undoubtedly true that the amount requested would not be half as much as it would be if the husband's reply was surly and antagonistic."

Battersby read this item over twice to make sure he grasped its meaning, and just then his wife entered the room.

"George," she said, "I want some money."

Battersby smiled affably.

"Yes, my dear," he pleasantly remarked, "and how much do you want?"

Mrs. Battersby stared at him in amazement.

"I said I wanted some money."

This time she spoke with much distinctness.

"And I asked you how much you wanted," Battersby merrily reminded her.

"Fifty dollars," she snapped.

Battersby almost fainted. He had imagined she was after $5 and that his genial tone would cut the amount to $2.50.

But he handed over the fifty without further ado—and then there the misleading item into infinitesimal fragments.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Panthers as Household Pets.

"A British official in an out of the way Persian district invited me to stay at his house for a night," narrates a globe trotter. "I was comfortably settled upon a sofa just before dinner when my rest was suddenly disturbed by a loud bang at the sitting room door, which, flying open, admitted two enormous animals, which I at first took for dogs.

"Both of them made at once for my sofa, and while the larger one curled comfortably round my feet and composed itself to sleep, the smaller one seated itself on the floor and commenced licking my face and hands, an operation which I dared I should strongly have resented.

"But those white, gleaming teeth and flashing green eyes filled me with something akin to terror. To my relief, my host entered at this juncture.

"Making friends with the panthers, I see," he remarked pleasantly. "They are nice, companionable beasts."

"That may have been true at the time. The fact remains, however, that three months afterward one of them devoured a native child."—London Telegraph.

Nature Sometimes Makes Mummies.

Natural mummification, the changing of the human body into a dried condition without artificial treatment, is an extremely rare phenomenon. In a case reported by Hon. S. Wolfsohn of British Honduras, a middle aged coolie who disappeared between January and March, 1907, was found more than a year afterward, on May 6, 1908, in a corrugated iron hut as a perfectly preserved mummy. The hut, in a somewhat isolated spot at Sibum, was raised on blocks four or five feet above the ground and had a door and three shutters, one shutter being open, while one had fallen out. The body was clothed in a cotton undershirt, dark jersey and duck trousers, two pieces of rope around the neck proving self strangulation. The desiccation seemed to have been favored by a combination of conditions, the season having been extraordinarily dry and the small iron house excessively hot, though well ventilated, while the body was thin and attenuated as a result of mental disorder.

Turn About.

A young English student late one cold and wintry night found the door of his college locked against him. The young man, outside argued with the doorkeeper inside, cajoled and entreated, but to no avail. Eventually he slipped half a sovereign under the door and was admitted. It was a financial deal wisely thought out on strict business lines. Once inside, he informed the janitor (falsely) that, unfortunately, after taking the half sovereign out of his purse he had dropped the purse itself on the doorstep. The attendant went out to secure it, but once on the chilly, wet doorstep the door was slammed. Then the deal was repeated, for the shivering mercenary was not allowed into his warm abode until he had slipped the half sovereign back again.

Thoroughly Prepared.

At a religious service in Scotland the late Lord Kelvin noticed a youngster accompanying his grandparents and sitting close as a young owl through the sermon.

At the close of the service Lord Kelvin congratulated the grandfather upon the excellence of the young man's behavior.

"Och, aye," returned the veteran, "Duncan's well threatened afore he gangs in."

ON THE ROOF.

He Didn't Want to Seize the Opportunity, but She Did.

By HARRIET LUMMIS SMITH.

(Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.)

"We've time enough yet to take a look at the city from the top of the securities building. It's worth seeing, you know."

Prudence should have vetoed the suggestion. For the longer half of the blissful afternoon Viola had been aware that Raymond's eyes were saying more than they should and that their mute eloquence was singularly sweet and satisfying. Considering the fact that she was as good as engaged to another man, discretion counseled flight. A voice within, an authoritative voice, cried out that at the best the day would soon be over and urged her to make the most of it.

Viola compromised. "Mr. Raymond suggests our getting a view of the city from the top of one of the skyscrapers," she said, turning to her out of town guests. "If you are not too tired" And her heart leaped at the promptness of their protests.

She walked beside Raymond silently, glad that he, too, seemed to have nothing to say. She was frightened to find herself clinging so fiercely to the joy of that afternoon together. He had come upon them quite by accident, but Viola knew that but for her he would have lifted his hat and gone his way. The gladness that leaped to her eyes at the sight of him, the tremor in her voice as she spoke his name, had been his undoing—and hers. They had lunched and taken a drive along the boulevards. Viola's country cousins had had the time of their lives. And now the western sky was red, and the time for saying goodby was near.

They stood looking down upon the city. Raymond, as in duty bound, pointed out the objects of interest. The country cousins hung upon his words and declared that they would not have missed the sight for anything. As for Viola, she had no eyes for the crawling streets between the steep cliffs of brick and stone nor for the crawling creatures far below. Brazenly she feasted her eyes upon him.

He turned suddenly and looked into her eyes, and his own caught fire. A moment later they were standing together in an angle of the roof, sheltered from the view of their companions. The noise of the city below them seemed far away.

Raymond broke the spell by a downward gesture. "I wish it were all mine."

"You mean the whole town? What greediness!" she laughed.

"So that I could give it all to you." "Thank you, but I'm not ambitious to be a plutocrat. Of course one must have the things one is used to. Poverty is the worst of all."

"Is it?" His eyes challenged hers. "Oh, don't! You make it so hard for me!"

"You make it hard for yourself when you fight against your heart."

"Oh, you don't understand, Phil. It isn't as if I had only myself to think of."

"Do you ever give a thought to me?" She put her hands over her ears in sudden terror. If she listened longer she was lost. "I must go," she said hurriedly. "I've stayed longer than I should, but it was so pleasant." She turned in a panic and fled across the roof, and he followed slowly. When he overtook her her eyes were dilated.

"They're gone!" she gasped.

"Who?"

"Why, Leonard and Bessie. What could have induced them to go without us?"

"I don't know, I'm sure. But they will be waiting for us below without doubt."

He tried the door, rattled the knob sharply and met questioning her gaze with a blank stare. "We're locked up here," he exclaimed. Then as Viola laughed hysterically he added in haste: "Don't be frightened. It will be very easy to attract some one's attention."

Half an hour later, flushed and dripping with perspiration as a result of his fruitless exertion, he acknowledged his mistake. "Your cousins must have thought we had gone down before them. But after they get home and we fail to make our appearance it will of course occur to somebody that we're still up here. And the only thing to do is to resign ourselves to wait with what patience we can muster."

She looked at him reproachfully, but he did not meet her eyes. He sat some distance from her, staring moodily at the roof. Furtively Viola put back her veil and smoothed her hair. Apparently her appearance was to him a matter of complete indifference. He never turned his eyes.

Her sense of resentment found voice at last. "Are you going to sit here in absolute silence? Haven't you anything to say?"

"I have plenty to say, but I can't say it without taking advantage of the situation."

A long silence; then Raymond felt the slipping of a small hand down his sleeve. "I rather think, Phil," said a tremulous voice, "that I want you to take advantage of the situation."

Help was long in coming. As the darkness fell Viola drew closer, and her hand stole into his of its own accord.

It was a night without a star, and for that reason it was more startling when suddenly a blinding illumination lit up the space where they sat. Viola shrieked and hid her face on her lover's shoulder.

"Only a searchlight, dearest. Rather startling on this pitch black night, wasn't it?"

Viola blushed in his arms. "Phil, do you suppose anybody saw?"

The young man smiled. "Perhaps," he acknowledged. "In fact, little girl, I rather hope somebody did."

Fifteen or twenty minutes later the sound of approaching footsteps told them that release was at hand. Raymond shouted. There was a sound of a key turning in the lock. A grinning policeman and the watchman of the building confronted them. Explanations were exchanged. The elevator had stopped running at 6 o'clock, and the two young people descended the endless flights of stairs as blithely as if they were walking on air.

Viola's heart was in an uproar. The story brought by the country cousins had aroused grave suspicions, which Viola's mother explained as she clung to her daughter.

"It couldn't have happened at a more unfortunate time. To begin with, Mr. Pickering was annoyed. He makes such a hobby of punctuality, you know. And then when Leonard and Bessie came in—"

She raised her head from Viola's shoulder and looked sharply at the young man who had escorted her daughter home. Raymond bore her scrutiny in silence. It was Viola who prompted her impatiently.

"Go on, mamma. When Leonard and Bessie came in—"

"It was, of course, entirely absurd," declared Viola's mother persistently, addressing herself to Raymond, "but one must make allowances for a lover's natural jealousy. When Leonard and Bessie said that you had been with them all afternoon and that you and Viola had suddenly disappeared the poor man jumped to the conclusion that you had eloped."

There was an impressive silence, which Viola improved by removing her hat.

"Of course we must explain at once," Viola's mother continued. "Would it be better for you to phone him, Viola, or will you send him a note? Perhaps you had better phone him and say you are sending the note. You see, it is important that the matter should be cleared up without delay."

"I don't know that it's worth while to make explanations, mamma," she said. "It is true I didn't have any intention of eloping; but, just the same, I'm going to marry Phil."

What Wearied Him.

A friend once asked an aged man what caused him to complain so often at evanescence of pain and weariness. "Alas," replied he, "I have every day so much to do. I have two falcons to tame, two hares to keep from running away, two hawks to manage, a serpent to confine, a lion to chain and a sick man to tend and wait upon."

"Well, well," commented his friend, "you are busy indeed! But I didn't know that you had anything to do with a mummy. How, then, do you make that out?"

"Why," continued the old man, "listen. Two falcons are my eyes, which I must guard diligently; the two hares are my feet, which I must keep from walking in the ways of sin; the two hawks are my hands, which I must train to work, that I may provide for myself and those dependent on me as well as for a needy friend occasionally; the serpent is my tongue, which I must keep over bridle lest it speak unseemly; the lion is my heart, with which I have a continual fight lest evil things come out of it, and the sick man is my whole body, which is always needing my watchfulness and care. All this daily wears out my strength."

Had the Effect.

"Yes," she said in answer to something he had said, "the old songs are very beautiful."

"Beautiful!" he exclaimed enthusiastically. "Beautiful hardly describes them. They are—they are—well, compared with them the songs of today are trash, the veriest trash."

"I agree with you, yet the old songs sometimes contain sentiments that one cannot wholly approve."

"I think you are mistaken. There is John Howard Payne's 'Home, Sweet Home,' for instance. You surely do not agree with all the sentiments it contains?"

"Why not?" he asked warmly. "Why not?"

"Because," she said, glancing at the clock, which was marking the hour of 11—"because there is a line in that song which says 'There's no place like home.' You do not believe that, do you?"

And he coughed a hollow cough and then he went slowly out into the night.

She Is So Sensitive.

"I wish some persons weren't so self-sufficient and ready to see an insult when none is intended," remarked the man with the troubled look, looking for sympathy. "Now, last night I got myself into an awkward fix just trying to be agreeable and to please everybody. I went to see a young lady I think a great deal of—yes, I do think a great deal of her, but I wish she would be more sensible. Girl friend of hers was there, and it was her first visit since she'd sent a crazy looking, good for nothing decorated cup and saucer with scalloped edges as a birthday gift."

"When was out shopping," the girl friend explained, "and saw that a cup and saucer I just thought of you, Marguerite."

"How? Hand painted, isn't it?"

"Now, the recipient's complexion is natural, as any one can see, and there was no reason for her to be so chilly toward me the rest of the evening. Hang such sensitiveness!"—New York Telegram.

SONOMA INDEX - TRIBUNE

Sonoma, Oct. 30, 1909.

H. H. GRANICE, Editor.

The San Francisco Call, which has been the right hand bower of the graft prosecution ever since Heney promised to send Ruef and the boodling Supervisors to jail some years ago, now sees the errors of its ways, and is supporting Fickert for the District Attorneyship of that city as against Heney. We are pleased to make a note of this, as it proves the assertion made in these columns months ago that Heney is a reformer who does not reform and that the graft prosecution of San Francisco is played out. The election of Fickert will prove this and our sky-scraping metropolitan contemporary is not so blind as to see the handwriting on the wall.

Grand Jurors and Their Mileage.

District Attorney Clarence F. Lea has given the Board of Supervisors a written opinion on the matter of mileage fees for grand jurors and trial jurors. In it he holds that the jurors are entitled to mileage for each time they are called back from their homes in a case, or in the investigation of matters by the grand jury.

The official says the test provided by language of the code is that a juror shall be entitled to mileage for distance "actually traveled." With this understanding, he does not believe a grand juror entitled to mileage for every day he may attend as a juror. Otherwise he could return home every day, and collect a mileage for the entire distance. He would be traveling unnecessarily if he returned home during the continuous sessions of the jury from day to day. Mr. Lea is of the opinion that the grand juror is entitled to mileage for each separate time he is called to a session of the grand jury, and advises the board to allow the bills of the grand jurors accordingly.

Under this construction of the section, the juror will be paid mileage for each separate meeting of the body, but not for separate days of the same continuous session.

In other counties of the state the practice has been to pay the jurors mileage for each time they are called together. Mr. Lea says that the two dollars per day allowed the grand jurors is not sufficient to pay the actual expense of attending for most jurors, saying nothing about the loss of their time and absence from their business affairs.—Santa Rosa Republican.

Mrs. Lubeck's Last Will.

The last will and testament of the late Mrs. Amelia Barbara Lubeck, recently filed for probate in the Superior Court of this county, and which takes precedence over the will dated December 7, 1900, having been made and dated seven days later, to wit: on December 14, 1900, reads as follows:

I give devise and bequeath all my property of every kind to my niece Isabella Louisa Landsborough. I nominate my said niece together with Mr. George W. Lane of San Francisco my executor to act altogether without bonds.

I have also expressed certain wishes to my said executor G. W. Lane, which I know he will carry out if possible. Written, signed and dated by my own hand this fourteenth day of December, 1900. AMELIA BARBARA LUBECK.

Has Perfected its Drill.

The M. and S. Drill Company, having perfected its drill, is now prepared to do artesian well work which the company claims cannot be done by any drill on earth. The drill has been subjected to severe experimental tests on the private residence grounds of Capt. H. E. Boyes in this valley the past few months and having passed through the experimental stage is now capable of doing all that has been claimed for it. The company is now prepared to do borings of all diameters and depths at reasonable rates and prompt work will be guaranteed. See ad elsewhere in these columns.

Death of an Ex-Resident.

Charles Leverone, brother of G. B. Leverone, died at the home of the latter on the Wickersham ranch Monday. Deceased was a native of Italy and aged 56 years. He had resided in this valley off and on for thirty years, but had lately been engaged in mining in one of the northern counties. The funeral took place from Bates' undertaking parlors Wednesday morning, the remains being interred in the Catholic cemetery.

A Child Bride.

A marriage license was issued in the County Clerk's office, Santa Rosa, Wednesday, to Aretus Marshall, 27, and Elsie Plum, 15, both of that city. The child's mother gave her consent to issuing the license.

Sonoma County's New Court House Nearing Completion.

Much apparent progress has been made during the past week in the new court house, says the Santa Rosa Republican. The marble work is about completed and the big court in the center of the building is now a thing of beauty than it has been at any time before. The marble setters expect to complete their work some time next week. All the light chandeliers have been installed and present a beautiful appearance. The scagliola workmen are still engaged on the large pillars on the second floor. They have several weeks more work before they will be through with their task. For several weeks workmen have been engaged in laying the inlaid flooring and a large part of that work is completed.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by Druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Gets Final Divorce Decree.

Mrs. Christina Gassner of this place was granted a final decree of divorce from her husband, Jos. Gassner, by Judge Seawell last Monday.

She was also allowed the custody of the two minor children, Anita M. and Helen J. Gassner and given possession of all the community property, which includes 16.20 acres of land situated in the Harazthy tract in this place, furniture, chickens and a cow.

Landy-Riley.

Miss May Catherine Landy and Mr. Edward Riley were married at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Jas. Landy, in Petaluma last Wednesday.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Landy and the late James Landy and is a sister of Capt. Jack and Capt. James Landy. The family resided in their home on Broadway in this place for a number of years, but removed to Petaluma eight or ten years ago.

Now is the time to lay concrete sidewalks. See Trudgen, the stone mason, about it.

The weather of the past month, alternating as it has between sunshine and showers, has started the grass to growing, and both the valley lands and surrounding mountain sides are putting on a mantle of green much in advance of previous seasons.

The remains of R. G. Woods, who died in Giant, Contra Costa county, Sunday, were shipped to this place and interred in the family burial plot in Mountain Cemetery Tuesday. The deceased, who was the father-in-law of Paul MacQuiddy, was aged about fifty years.

A valuable horse belonging to James Tate was killed one day last week by becoming entangled in a barbed wire fence. Mr. Tate was attending the Portola Festival in San Francisco when the accident occurred, and upon his arrival home found the unfortunate animal dead in the pasture. It had been frightfully cut by the barbs of the wire in its efforts to get free.

Dr. E. Z. Hennessey Interposes a General Denial.

Dr. E. Z. Hennessey of Napa, one of the leading physicians and surgeons of Northern California, has filed in the Superior Court of Napa county his answer to the sensational allegations of malpractice made against him recently by R. L. Agers, arranger, in a damage suit for $25,000. The plaintiff alleges that Dr. Hennessey treated him six months for a broken leg and so unskillfully set the fractured member that he is permanently crippled. The doctor, who is a noted and experienced surgeon, makes a general denial of the charges in his answer, and is not worrying himself over the suit.

Afraid of Ghosts

Many people are afraid of ghosts. Few people are afraid of germs. Yet the ghost is a fancy and the germ is a fact. If the germ could be magnified to a size equal to its terrors it would appear more terrible than any fire-breathing dragon. Germs can't be avoided. They are in the air we breathe, the water we drink.

The germ can only prosper when the condition of the system gives it free scope to establish itself and develop. When there is a deficiency of vital force, languor, restlessness, a sallow cheek, a hollow eye, when the appetite is poor and the sleep is broken, it is time to guard against the germ. You can fortify the body against all germs by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It increases the vital power, cleanses the system of clogging impurities, enriches the blood, puts the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition in working condition, so that the germ finds no weak or tainted spot in which to breed. "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no alcohol, whisky or habit-forming drugs. All its ingredients printed on its outside wrapper. It is not a secret nostrum but a medicine of known composition and with a record of 40 years of cures. Accept no substitute—there is nothing "just as good." Ask your neighbors

Who is the Woman and Who is Bill?

The Petaluma Courier of the 28th inst., says: "Constable Jas. Sullivan today arrested a man named Wm. Brady and a woman whose home is in Sonoma. Both are charged with drunkenness and disturbing the peace. The woman is an old offender."

OIL EXPERTS VISIT LAWLER RANCH.

Make a Thorough Inspection of the Place With Intention of Following up Prospect for Oil.

A party of oil experts, accompanied by John Lawler, Sr., of Petaluma, passed through town Thursday morning en route to the Lawler ranch, located in the hills three miles north of here.

Several weeks ago it became known to Mr. Lawler that surface indications pointed strongly to the presence of oil on his Sonoma ranch and the discovery has created considerable interest here, for the presence of oil in this valley, which boasts of several gas wells, has long been suspected.

The oil experts who visited the Lawler ranch to inspect the place to determine the presence of oil have not as yet made their report but it is said they were pleased with the indications.

Ned Buckley Robbed.

E. M. Gender, formerly of Glen Ellen but who has been conducting a road house on the Sonoma road between this place and Santa Rosa, had his pockets picked of $75 Saturday night in San Francisco while mingling with the Portola crowd of merry-makers. Mr. Gender is an old-time theatrical man of the metropolis, his stage name being Ned Buckley. He ran several vaudeville show houses in San Francisco in the early fifties, sixties and seventies.

In those days the vaudeville stage was frowned upon by public opinion, but Ned has lived to see the day when that class of entertainment is the most popular and fashionable amusement of the hour. The fact of the matter is that Ned Buckley was about 50 years ahead of the times when the "show business" on Kearney street, San Francisco.

Hunting Without a License Tag Comes High.

Game Warden Ingalls on Tuesday swore out a warrant in Justice Atchinson's court, Santa Rosa, charging Chas. L. Filippini, Victor de Carli and Peter M. Magoria with violating the game law. The accused were hunting in the hills south of this place, one day this week, when they were pounced upon by the officer, who demanded that they produce their hunting licenses. Through ignorance of the law or some other cause they had failed to secure them and were up against it. The men assured the Game Warden that they would plead guilty to a charge of violating the game law and were allowed to depart. Justice Atchinson fined the hunters $10 each and they have made good.

Auto Runs Down Bicyclist.

George Luce, brother of A. S. Luce, Jr., of this place, while riding a bicycle along Fourth street, Santa Rosa, Tuesday evening, was run down by an auto and narrowly escaped being killed. Young Luce was thrown heavily to the ground but fortunately fell clear of the big auto and escaped with minor bruises. His wheel, however, which received the full force of the impact, was badly wrecked.

THOS. HOPPER WILL SUE HIS SONS.

Aged Banker Wants Full Control of Property Which He Entrusted to His Sons Some Years Ago.

Thomas Hopper of Santa Rosa, for many years a leading banker of this county and who lived in this valley in the early days, became widowed eight or ten years ago and in due time remarried. His first wife was a thrifty, plain and industrious woman as well as a devoted wife and mother and did more than her share toward accumulating a fortune, which was reckoned at over half a million at the time of her death.

Mr. Hopper when he entered upon his second matrimonial venture was nearly 80 years of age and intellectually as bright as a new dollar. His first wife was like our mothers used to be, and as the aged banker had never had his experience with the ways of the "new woman" of the present day until he remarried he got a "high flyer" who forthwith commenced to spend the accumulation of many years with such recklessness that the old gentleman and his relatives called a halt. Had this not been done Tom Hopper and his sons by his first marriage would have been reduced to beggary in a few years. It was then that Mr. Hopper got busy and turned over what remained of his fortune to his three sons to be held by them in trust. He thus circumvented the extravagance of Mrs. Hopper No. 2 and provided for his future. This, of course, was not to the liking of the madam, who was unable to afford the luxury of a carriage, with its coat of arms, a liveried footman and all that sort of thing. These had to be dispensed with when a halt was called, and a separation and law suit followed.

The trust reposed in the sons, however, saved the remnants of the Hopper fortune and enabled the old gentleman to free himself from the lady with extravagant tastes and ruinous ideas, as the transfer of his property to his children left him practically penniless and altogether too "utterly unt" for a wife fond of the frivolities of life.

For a long time peace reigned in the Hopper family, but lately the erstwhile active man of business affairs has chafed under the restraint of being deprived of taking part in the activities of life and wants to do things.

With this object in view it is stated that Mr. Hopper will evoke the aid of the courts to have the alleged trust terminated. Notices have already been served upon Henry T. Hopper, the Ukiah banker, William L. Hopper and Wesley Hopper, the sons, informing them of their father's intention to terminate the trust, and again control his property. When the property was transferred to the sons it was said to be worth two hundred thousand dollars. Previous to this, however, Mr. Hopper had decided to members of his family an equal amount of property.

The sons, it is said, will contest the suit on the grounds that the property turned over to them was in the nature of a gift.

The Hobo and Sebastopol Justice.

There was an affecting scene in Judge Harry Morris' courtroom at Sebastopol recently, says the Press Democrat. It did not affect the magistrate worth a cent, as he promptly met the ends of justice in the case with the limit allowed by the law.

A man of the hobo type was brought before the magistrate charged with an offense. The fellow fell on his knees and clasped his hands and with tears in his eyes pleaded for mercy. His plea did not carry weight and he was sent below.

Away from the judicial presence he remarked to the officer having him in charge:

"Well I played my part as well as I knew how, but it did not amount to a—"

STEIGER CO. WINS, SONOMA LOSES.

Judgment for Over Eight Hundred Dollars Given by Judge Seawell.

The City of Sonoma loses and the Steiger Terra Cotta Company wins the law suit instituted by the latter to recover the value of a quantity of tiling, etc., seized by the former and used in roofing its New City Hall two years ago in an effort to carry out a bright (?) idea that emanated in the precocious brain of some one in this community who would get something for nothing for the city.

It didn't work, however, for the simple reason that the law had to be reckoned with and this fact had evidently been overlooked by those in authority at that time. However that may be, this way of doing business was not to the liking of the Steiger people, who forthwith brought suit against the City of Sonoma to recover the value of goods belonging to them which they claimed had been unlawfully seized by the city and converted to its own use.

Suit was then instituted by the Steiger people against the city to recover damages for the conversion of its property consisting of Spanish roof tiles, elastic roof cement, roof nails, asphalt paper and Portland cement.

The case was originally tried before Judge Burnett in the Superior Court of this county about two years ago and judgment was given against the Steiger Co., which carried the case to the Court of Appeals, and after considerable delay, the lower court was reversed and the case ordered retried.

The case then came up before Judge Seawell, the former Judge having resigned to take his seat as one of the Justices of the Appellate Court.

Judge Seawell handed down his opinion Saturday and gave judgment for the Steiger Terra Cotta Company and against the City of Sonoma for $823.57.

In the former trial of the case the value of the property was fixed at $600. A different matter was presented at the trial before Judge Seawell, the question of value being the sole question, and the evidence sustained the view as to the value being in excess of the amount named in the findings on file in the first trial.

Judge Seawell declares that defendant contractor Newman of Napa, who was also made a party to the suit, in his answer supplies the necessity of a demand. Also, that none of the alleged items of costs incurred after the first trial and offered in evidence upon the second hearing should be allowed. All objections to testimony on which rulings were reserved are overruled by the court and an exception is allowed in each instance to the aggrieved party.

There is still another suit against this city pending in the Superior Court of this county, the outgrowth of the building of the New City Hall. This latter suit was instituted by L. Quartaroli, Norman J. Heggie, Julius Fochetti and Charles Dal Pozzetto, who also claim that building material belonging to them was seized by the defendant city and turned over to contractor Newman to complete our hall of justice, which actually cost the municipality about $15,000 for a $28,000 building owing to the failure J. T. MacQuiddy, the original contractor, and the after results.
